Here's hoping they don't get paid with bunch of crumpled singles.

Three stylists have agreed to settle suits charging that they got short-changed while helping primp the strippers at Scores and the Penthouse Executive Club.

The plaintiffs -- all men -- claimed they were forced to pay an illegal "house fee" after every shift, and also lost 10 percent of their wages when they redeemed the jiggle-joint "funny money" that the gals gave them for make-up and hairdos.

Terms of their deals, struck a week ahead of a scheduled Manhattan federal court trial, weren't disclosed.
